HAWK HAPPENINGS

Charles Kettering stated, “High achievement always takes place in a framework of high expectation.” At Woodward-Granger CSD we are busy building futures for all of our students by personalizing their learning and meeting their unique, individual needs. To achieve at high levels we recognize this work must be conducted in a ‘supportive culture of high expectations’. I often wonder if I can “see” high expectations when I enter a school or even a classroom. What might be indicators of high expectations in our schools? I think there are some ‘look-fors’ we can observe to determine if a supportive culture of high expectations exist in our buildings.

Instruction occurs from ‘bell to bell’ in classrooms that have a culture of high expectations. It is important for teachers to utilize all the minutes of instruction throughout the entire day. Teachers develop, instruct and monitor a number of practices and routines to ensure there is ‘time on learning’. For instance, these routines can minimize instructional time being lost during transitions as well as guide students during independent practice. Every minute counts!

In a supportive culture of high expectations, students are active and engaged in their own learning. It’s important for students to see value in their education and take ownership in their learning. Teachers can create the conditions necessary for this to occur. Instruction needs to be rigorous and relevant to the students. Students should be allowed to explore high interest topics and show their learning in real, authentic ways. In addition, students should be doing the ‘heavy cognitive lift’ in the classroom.

Accountability is key in developing a culture of high expectations. It’s important that 100% of the students are following 100% of the directions 100% of the time. We work hard to create a learning environment that supports and challenges students on a daily basis. School (and home) is a great place to learn how to be accountable to expectations considering we will spend a lifetime being held accountable as employees in our vocations and citizens in a community.

Last, our messaging to students and the entire learning community contributes to a supportive culture of high expectations as well. Everything we say and do should send a strong message of high expectations to our students. How well we maintain the facilities sends a message. How we interact with one another sends a message. Even what we post on the walls and what we celebrate sends a message. All of our messaging should point to a supportive culture of high expectations.

Woodward-Granger CSD is capable of becoming a premier school district in the metro area. In order to realize this goal, we must continue to develop a framework of high expectations to ensure student performance increases and high achievement becomes the standard. The continuous improvement cycle never ends. It is a relentless pursuit of excellence that requires hard work, determination and a growth mindset from everyone involved. That is exactly what I’ve been experiencing since the first day of school.

Dr. Matt Adams, Superintendent

Sales and Workplace Class Visits Best Buy

“Thank you to the Best Buy on University Ave in West Des Moines for hosting the Sales and Workplace Communication class yesterday! The students learned a great deal about the sales process and even participated in some “Real Plays” to practice their skills! I can’t thank Gio Morrow enough for working with our students!

ARTIST SPOTLIGHT

Isabelle Coffin’s perseverance in the art room has earned her the artist spotlight! Everyday Isabelle comes into art with a great attitude and creativity to spare. Even when on the brink of quitting she knows when to take a step back and give herself a moment to think about the next steps in her compositions. No matter where she is in the art making process, she is always thinking of ways to make her art better, and more original to her.
Keep calm and paint on!

2019 Speech Camp Recap

Both new and returning speech students posed for a picture before performance night began.

On November 11th, Speech students, both new and returning, showed off their skills at performance night. Students performed in several categories including improvisation, musical theater, ensemble, poetry, storytelling, acting, and more! This year we had a record-breaking twenty three students from eighth to twelfth grade who participated in their first ever speech event! The student performers and student coaches all did an incredible job, and we are excited for the upcoming competition season!

Dia de los Muertos

At the end of October, students from Spanish 3 and Introduction to Bakery came together to make traditional Pan de Muertos and to learn more about the traditional Mexican celebration. In Spanish 3, students spent the week researching and constructing ofrendas, an altar created for an individual person that has died. The ofrendas are intended to welcome the spirit of the individual to the altar setting. Pan de Muertos, or Bread of the Dead is also traditionally placed on the altar. Introduction to Bakery students prepared the dough in their classes, students from both classes participated in shaping the bread. On Friday, Nov. 1st, the classes came together in Señora McCord's room to hear the significance behind the celebration, see the ofrendas, and enjoy the Pan de Muertos together. All levels of high school Spanish participated in decorating the ofrendas. Señora Vaughan's Spanish 1 classes made papel picado to hang above the ofrendas. Spanish 2 classes made orange, paper, cempasúchil flowers to adorn the ofrenda and guide spirits home. Spanish 4 students created and decorated colorful calaveras de azúcar (sugar skulls). This was a meaningful cross-curricular, multilevel project for all students.

STUDENT OF THE MONTH

STUDENT OF THE MONTH

Lindsay's quality of being a genuine person is so uplifting to others. Both in and out of the classroom, she is always ready to get straight to work and get the job done.

Lindsay always does her best, and that shows in her quality of work.

Lindsay is a great role model for all students at Woodward-Granger!

LINDSAY MESCHER

FRESHMAN

STUDENT OF THE MONTH

Organized and efficient are just a couple of Taylor's traits that make her a clear choice for Student of the Month!

Taylor's level of responsibility is above and beyond normal.

She misses class for choir lessons, but always communicates her schedule with a wonderfully-worded email to her teachers and never misses a beat academically.

She is kind to her classmates and held in high regard. Great job, Taylor!

TAYLOR BUCKMAN

SOPHOMORE

STUDENT OF THE MONTH

Kris is always kind to everyone and is considerate of his audience when having conversations.

He is always great about helping his peers and keeping fellow students on task.

He is an all around good-natured kid who is cognizant of character and leadership.

He communicates well with his teachers.

Keep up the good work, Kris!

KRIS KAMMERER

JUNIOR

STUDENT OF THE MONTH

Caleb's positive attitude and willingness to help make him a perfect fit for Student of the Month!

He gets along well with his peers and steps up and takes the lead on a lot of classwork and extra-curricular projects.

All of Caleb's outstanding qualities and talents are sure to make him a success in his future endeavors!

COUNSELOR'S CORNER

The topic for this month is about understanding what a support system is and who is a part of that system. Students will take time to identify who is a part of their support system and why that support system is important. Understanding who you can count on is key in developing social and emotional skills. It is very powerful for students to know that they have people they can count on and being able to access them when necessary. At home discussion: Who is in my support system? (Home, school, etc...) How do I ask for help? When do I ask for help? Be on the lookout for information about our monthly topics and information from our district-wide initiative on bullying/harassment. Feel free to contact me if you ever have any questions or concerns. Lisa Anderson lisaanderson@wghawks.school 515-999-2231

PBIS NOTE

by Ms. Koenen

The students have been busy showing all of their PBIS values which include BE SAFE, BE KIND, and BE RESPONSIBLE. This month's focus has been on the value of being safe. We have discussed ways to be safe in all settings such as the classroom, hallways, lunchroom, and restrooms. The students have continued to practice this value daily, and earned golden tickets along the way. Teachers have been doing a great job of teaching safety to students, and what it means in different ways. The students are enjoying the school store and using their golden tickets for some awesome things! The November PBIS assembly was a great way to kick off Thanksgiving break. The students were recognized for their positive behaviors, and the students of the month were highlighted as well. It is always great to see such a positive environment with the students. Next month, the PBIS team will be focusing on the value of kindness. We will talk about how to be kind towards those in school along with members of the community. We will also be welcoming Andy the Armadillo from Texas Roadhouse! Continue to ask your children about their PBIS values and school, and come up with ways to BE SAFE at home and out in the community!

Try these Winter Break boredom busters

Here's how you can put 5-2-1-0 into action this month:

Less Screen-Time, More Fun!

When school is out for an extended period of time — like winter break — screen-time can surge. With no homework or extracurricular activities, kids and teens often turn to TV and video games for entertainment. Put the focus back on family time and fun during Winter Break with these tips:

- Set limits (and stick to them)
5-2-1-0 Healthy Choices Count! recommends less than 2 hours of recreational screen time.
- Be a good role model
After you establish screen-time guidelines, every family member (parents, too!) should follow them.

- Do alternate activities
Take advantage of Winter Break to do screen-free activities together as a family. Check out the next column for ideas!

INDOOR ACTIVITY IDEAS:

- Rent a book from the library on the first day of break.
- Provide an incentive for finishing before break is over.
- Host a board game tournament or complete a puzzle.
- Create a dance routine to your favorite song.
- Try “Fuzzy Ball Pick-Up,” “Animal Kingdom” or one of the other fun games from the 5-2-1-0 Activity Book.
- Write and mail letters to your friends or relatives.
- Build a tent and camp in the living room.
- Make a personal collage from old magazine cut-outs.

OUTDOOR ACTIVITY IDEAS:

- You can still be active outdoors in the winter. Just bundle up!
- Go sledding
- Build a snowman
- Go for a nature walk
- Make snow angels
- Go ice-skating
- Build a snow fort
- Challenge your neighbors or siblings to a snowball fight.
- Make snow paint! Just add food coloring to water and put in a spray bottle.
- Make bird feeders with pinecones, peanut butter and birdseed or string popcorn or cranberries on fishing line.
