District Preparing for ESSA Changes

by Brad Anderson Superintendent

Woodward-Granger

No Child Left Behind is a thing of the past and taking its place is the new Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA). Signed into law on December 10th the new law contains over 1,000 pages. Here are some highlights of what Woodward-Granger can expect from this new legislation:

State Authority: Under the new law, the job of holding schools accountable largely shifts from the federal government to the states. But the federal government still provides a broad framework. Each state must set goals for its schools and evaluate how they're doing. States also have to create a plan for improving schools that are struggling or that have a specific group of students who are under performing. The job of setting these accountability standards will fall on the Iowa Department of Education.

Annual Testing: States still have to test students in reading and math once a year in grades 3 through 8, as well as once in high school. Students with IEPs and 504 plans will continue to get accommodations on those tests. And only 1 percent of all students can be given "alternate" tests. This provision takes away the concept of having multiple measures and multiple tests given to students.

Accountability: Under the new law, states may now consider more than just student test scores when evaluating schools. In fact, they must come up with at least one other measure. Other measures might include things like school safety and access to advanced coursework. But student performance is still the most important measure under the law. This additional school evaluation criteria will be spelled out and reported under the Iowa school report card.

Reporting: States have to continue to publicly report test results and other measures of student achievement and school success by "subgroups" of students. That includes students in special education, minorities, those in poverty and those learning English.

Proficiency Targets: From now on, states are required to set their own proficiency targets. They will also come up with a system of penalties for not meeting them. But the federal government will no longer require states to bring all kids to the proficient level on state tests. States also won't have to meet federal targets for raising test scores. These changes will eliminate the harsh federal penalties schools faced under NCLB.

Comprehensive Literacy Center: The new law calls for the creation of a national center that focuses on reading issues for kids with disabilities. That includes dyslexia. The center will be a clearinghouse for information for parents and teachers.

Literacy Education Grant Program: The law authorizes Congress to give up to $160 million in literacy grants to states and schools. The grants will fund instruction on key reading skills, such as phonological awareness and decoding.

Opt-Out: Opt-out is when parents decide not to have their child take a standardized test. The new law doesn't create a federal opt-out option for parents. But it also doesn't stop states from having their own opt-out laws if parents don't want their children to take state tests.

(note: all the above information was provided by US Dept. of Education, 2016.)

Overall the change from NCLB to ESSA is a good thing as it shifts responsibilities from the federal level back to the state level giving states a bigger role in holding schools accountable. At Woodward-Granger CSD we will adapt to these changes and continue to challenge our students to live up to higher academic standards.

If you have further questions about ESSA please contact the Central Office at 515-999-8022 or email at bradanderson@wghawks.school

To Make-Up Hours or Not?

by Brad Anderson Superintendent

When do we have to make up school hours and when do we not?

I frequently get asked the question about how and when do we as a school district need to make-up hours that are missed in a given school year and when do we not? Since our school has designated that we are on an hourly calendar, the answer is relatively simple in terms of what the law requires. This requirement states that accredited public schools must attend a minimum of 1,080 hours of instruction in a school year. So calendars that have more hours built into them have essentially built in the flexibility of additional hours to absorb in the event that hours are missed.

Where does this put us for 2016-17 hours missed?

As of early January when this article was written the district had missed 8.5 hours of instructional time. (6.5 hours was for the heat exchanger breaking at the MS/HS and the other 2 hours was due to the early dismissal prior to the holiday break). Because the annual district calendar was built on the assumption that we would be in school for 1,104.25 hours (additional 24.25 hours built in) then the 8.5 hours that we have already missed will not need to be made up for us to still meet the 1,080 hour requirement.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

The past few weeks, we were able to team up with the fourth grade classes to write some seasonal stories. The 4th graders were all prepared with pictures for the preschool students to choose a story idea. Together, they generated a problem, thought of a solution and came up with some supporting details. During each of three visits the stories were created, composed, and illustrated by each team. On our final visit, the 4th grade students read the stories and gave a copy to their preschool partners. The preschool students were very proud of their stories and illustrations!

During initial discussions, all the teachers were hoping for an activity that could help push the kids to continue their learning with all the busy schedules and activities that December can bring. The 4th grade students were very patient and did a fantastic job of encouraging our students to open up, have conversations and stay on topic. This collaboration was a wonderful opportunity for our preschool students to meet some of their older school mates and see the story writing process in action. We would like to extend a BIG thank you to the 4th grade teachers and students for creating a unique and exciting learning experience!

ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

ELEMENTARY HOUR OF CODE

Elementary students explored computer science as they celebrated Computer Science Education Week by doing the Hour of Code. The Hour of Code is a worldwide initiative to get students familiar with the basics of coding and to gain interest in the computer science field. Students learned the basics of computer science and did a special game or activity using block coding during their Hour of Code time. Kids designed art, played games, and created complex directions to be successful in various tasks. Have your child tell you more about their experience with coding! You can find activities at www.code.org or www.hourofcode.com for your child to do at home!

MIDDLE & HIGH SCHOOL

Woodward-Granger Middle School and High School student participated in Hour of Code™ during Computer Science Week (Dec. 5-11). Hour of Code is a one hour introduction to computer science. Students used problem solving skills to learn basic coding applications.

“The ‘Hour of Code™’ is a nationwide initiative by Computer Science Education Week [csedweek.org] and Code.org [code.org] to introduce millions of students to one hour of computer science and computer programming.”

With the holiday season behind us, Grandwood begins to focus on the second half of the school year. We have many important events from athletics to academic to social coming up on the horizon.

Grandwood athletics will be in full swing by mid January. The Special Olympics coaches are negotiating an arrangement with Des Moines East where each school would get to host a home basketball game. Grandwood is again looking forward to squaring off against the WG Middle School team. The Special Olympic skills and drills competition will be toward the end of January while the team competition will occur in early February. Additionally, Special Olympics track and field will happen toward the end of the school year.

Academic goals, Iowa Alternate Assessment, FAST testing, Iowa Assessments, and MAP testing are some of the ways our students will demonstrate their learning. As you can see, there is much to accomplish!

The social calendar will be full as well in 2017. Our students will again look dapper and dandy at Grandwood's Spring Dance. Details of this event are being ironed-out, so stay tuned! Additionally, our students will work on social skills during community outings. These are intended to extend classroom learning to the greater community. Our year will culminate with the graduation of our seniors. This is always an event best described by Shakespeare, "Parting is such sweet sorrow." Staff are excited, along with carrying a heavy heart, as we say our final goodbyes. However, we have many hurdles to clear and mountains to climb prior to the end of this school year. We are looking forward to them all!

(Mr. Pagel)

BOX TOPS FOR EDUCATION

One of our vocational sites is "Box Tops." Through this vocational site, students are able to work on sorting and counting skills. We are then able to turn these Box Tops in for cash for Grandwood! We can purchase extra items that can't be purchased with educational funds. Please watch on your regular purchased items for the small rectangle to cut. Send the Box Tops with your child to help keep the vocational site going AND earn cash for Grandwood! Thank you for your help!

Welcome Ms. Kooiker

Grandwood would like to welcome Ms. Jadyn Kooiker! (Kooiker is pronounced Quaker) Jadyn has enjoyed teaching special education for Woodward-Granger Elementary School but has always wanted to teach at Grandwood. Ms. Kooiker is excited to join the Grandwood Team!

She completed internship hours at Grandwood and also completed long-term subbing for associates on leave 2 years ago. Jadyn values the PBIS program and believes in all of her students!

Many of the student at Grandwood have an interested in entertainment wrestling (WWE). Fortunately, Mr. Evans has a connection with is brother being in the entertainment wrestling profession. Two wrestlers came to visit Grandwood to talk with the students about working hard to achieve your goals, staying physically fit, and how the PBIS Values at Grandwood are part of everyone's daily lives. Students had so much fun holding the belt, looking at the uniform, and trying on the mask!
